NORTH SLOPE HISTORIC DISTRICT
PIERCE COUNTY, WASHINGTON

Narrative Description:

Summary

The North Slope Historic District is a trapezoidal-shaped residential district located in Tacoma, Washington. The district is located on the upper portion of an area above the south shore of Commencement Bay, known to most for its historic homes and tree-lined streets. The streets are laid out parallel to the Commencement Bay water line, while the rest of Tacoma is in an North-South, East-West orientation. The District encompasses 228 acres.

As a whole, the District is mainly residential, the exceptions being along the arterials that define the District. There is one cluster of 3 commercial stores in the center of the district. The district is attractive with well-maintained residences and many of the homes have mature landscaping and large, old trees. The mixture of housing styles, along with the narrow streets, give the District a unique character.

The North Slope Historic District retains strong overall integrity of location, setting, design, materials, workmanship, feeling, and association. Individual historic properties vary in their retention of historic character, and the integrity of individual properties was evaluated on a case-by-case basis. The numbers of contributing vs. non-contributing resources are as follows:

Historic Contributing buildings =	698	or	73%
Historic Non-Contributing buildings =	145	or	16%
Non-Historic Non-Contributing =	85	or	10%
Vacant =	8	or	1%

TOTAL RESOURCES =	936

Historic Contributing Accessory Structures =	211	or	59%
Historic Non-Contributing Accessory Structures =	36	or	10%
Non-Historic Non-Contributing Accessory Structures =	110	or	31%

TOTAL ACCESSORY STRUCTURES =	357

Setting

Tacoma, Washington lies on the banks of Commencement Bay, where the Puyallup River flows into Puget Sound. The city is 30 miles south of Seattle, north of Interstate 5, and 30 miles north of the capital city, Olympia. To the west, a suspension bridge, the Tacoma Narrows Bridge, connects the city to the Kitsap peninsula. Through the community, a main railroad line runs south to California and north to Canada, with another line crossing the Cascades into eastern Washington.

The city of Tacoma has a rich history and an abundance of historic architecture. Founded in 1874, Tacoma was an important destination for the transcontinental railroad system. The railway connection to the deepwater port on Commencement Bay established the city as a major link in national and international commerce. Today there are nearly 200,000 citizens in Tacoma.

Downtown Tacoma has had to re-invent itself after the flight of many businesses to the Tacoma Mall in the 1960s. However, urban renewal largely passed Tacoma by, and this became a boon in the 1990s when preserving and restoring historic buildings led to a renaissance of the downtown built largely on enhancing the arts and converting historic buildings to new uses.

Today Tacoma boasts a number of re-furbished historic buildings. Among them is the old Union Station Railroad Depot, which was rehabilitated into a Federal Court House and numerous warehouses that have been converted into the Tacoma campus of the University of Washington.

Site & Streetscape Character

The District is bounded by North I Street, a main arterial on the north of the District. Division Avenue is a main arterial on the east, while N Steele Street, a busy residential street, holds down the west. North Grant Avenue caps off the south end of the trapezoid. There are 228 acres in the District and it contains a total of 1,285 resources.

The District lies on a hillside, ascending upward to the south from North I St. to N Cushman Ave. where it drops off slightly going south to Grant Avenue. There are three low points along N I St. One at each end, the NE and NW corners of the District, and the third is at N 9th and I Street. All of these locations are about 290 feet above Commencement Bay. The high point is 400 ft. at the intersection of N 8th and Cushman Ave. However, in general, the elevation gain from block to block never exceeds 25 ft.

The entire North Slope Historic District was settled primarily as a residential neighborhood, the same use the area has today. It contains a wide variety of architecture, from the humble bungalow, to the elegant Queen Anne mansion. The neighborhood has, for the most part, retained its street trees (mainly horse chestnut and maple), which contribute significantly to the area's historic character.

The district developed over time and it is common to find structures built as early as 1900 standing beside structures built 20, 30 and 50 years later. According to various Tacoma street maps, structures were built sporadically throughout the area rather than showing a concentration of building in one area at any one stage of growth. Seventy-eight percent of the homes were built prior to 1930. It took an additional 25 years for another 12 percent of the homes to be added. Such a development pattern has resulted in the varied architectural style and types found on any block, which is readily apparent to the casual observer.

The distribution of dwellings in Tacoma's North Slope Historic District is fairly dense, but this varies from block to block. While historic residential structures dominate, there have been contemporary multifamily apartment dwellings introduced into the neighborhood in several locations. When the District was platted, a 25-foot wide lot was the norm. Most early houses utilized an entire block for the house and garage. As time went on, portions of the block were sold off and houses were built on 1, 2 or more lots.

Setbacks are various and usually deep enough to give most dwellings separation from the street. Side setbacks were not mandated by the city and some houses are built almost lot-line to lot-line. In some cases roofs overhang from one house to the next; in other cases, 40 feet may separate each house. And for every rule, there is an exception in the District. For example, where N 11th St. intersects N Steele, an apartment house, (1415 N 11th St.) is built triangular shaped from sidewalk to sidewalk with only a 3 ft. setback.

Due to the slope of the ground, rising up from N I St., many houses are raised above street grade and retaining walls have been built along the sidewalk. They range in material from stone, to granite, to concrete. Today, stacked concrete blocks are being utilized as a replacement material. There are few fenced front yards. Those that are usually have chain link or picket fences. Many old-fashioned varieties of roses, lilacs, irises, lilies, stock, phlox still exist in flowerbeds. Hedges are of laurel or pruit and most commonly found on sides or backs of lots.

Driveways off the main roads are infrequent and most garages are located in the alleys. It wasn't until 1995 that the first three car, front facing garage type of home was built in the District.

The streets of the District are narrow, mostly tree-lined, and often change in width as one progresses down the street. Sidewalks are a mixture of old and new, with many damaged by street tree roots. Many of the sidewalks were built by the WPA in the 1930s, and are crosshatched on 5 and 6-ft. widths.

Within the district you will find three types of streetlights. The earliest streetlights have reinforced concrete bases and fluted metal posts with glass globes. These operated electrically in a series, so when one light went out they all did. These early street lights no longer function, but still stand in some locations. The second, newer versions of the streetlights nearly duplicate the originals, but are a few inches taller. Installed in 1986, these also have fluted metal posts, but have plastic globes instead of glass globes. The third type of streetlight found in the district is the luninaire or cobra head type of light. The cobras are found mainly on the arterials roads within the district.

Also located in the District is an exposed 2-block brick street, from N 9th St. from N I St. to N K St. Two other, two-block sections, N 10th and N 11th from I St. to K St., are paved with cobblestones. The cobblestones reportedly came as ballast stones brought in ships arriving from California to load lumber at Tacoma and Old Town docks. The gutters throughout the District still show the original bricks on numerous streets, with centers paved over with asphalt.

Within the district there is a new park (2002) called the North Slope Historic District Park. It was dedicated to the late Valerie Sivinski, a former Tacoma Preservation Officer and community activist who was instrumental in the formation of the first residential historic district in Tacoma.

Development

Primarily residential, within the North Slope Historic District neighborhood, you will find several churches, among them St. Patrick's Catholic Church, Immanuel Presbyterian Church, Christ Episcopal Church. There are also three small grocery stores, a laundry, neighborhood live theater, a service station, two taverns, a 7-11 store, prescription pharmaceutical store, professional offices, and small shops along Division Ave. and North I St.

Also of note within the district is the variety of architectural styles, which is a reflection of its development and growth pattern. The average number of homes being built spiked at three different times. The first "building boom", occurring between 1888 and 1893, and was composed of simple vernacular structures with front-end gables. During this era, the more stylish Queen Anne and Stick style, visible expressions of the buildings' design and playful elaboration of textured surfaces, can be found. These more elaborate Queen Anne structures were made possible with the newly mass-produced millwork that was readily available at the locally level.

By 1902 the second building boom started, lasting until 1915. During this era, Tacoma's housing returned to a more classically inspired formal design. Dwellings consisted of a variety of classic and regional American Foursquare designs and Craftsman style dwellings. The second boom came to an end with the onset of World War I.

The third "building boom" (1919-1929) greatly influenced building in the District. During this time, the Craftsman style gained in popularity, slowly replacing other styles of buildings. The California-inspired bungalow eventually became the most popular variant of the Craftsman style. Excellent examples of the bungalow abound in the area and can be readily observed walking along any of the streets in Tacoma's North Slope Historic District.

Architectural Styles:

The majority of the structures in Tacoma's North Slope Historic District demonstrate a liberal interpretation of classic architectural styles. The styles are heavily influenced by the local topography, available materials, the skills and practices of local carpenters, builders and architects, and especially the independent pioneering spirit of its residents. Housing styles were adapted, modified, and translated to generate a unique local flavor. Available pattern books combined varied builder skills and experience, unique geography and personal preferences to create homes that placed Victorian bays on the sides of rigid Foursquares, and Craftsman-inspired brackets and decorative shingles applied to the Foursquare and Dutch Gable homes. For example, at 1501 North 5th Street, a Victorian and a Foursquare collide; the hip roof arrests a corner turret, while the otherwise symmetrical mass is wrapped with a corner porch detailed with delicately turned wood balusters. The house at 1521 North 5th Street, also a hybrid foursquare, has a Victorian era wrap-around porch with a corner entrance, a deep, cut-out deck on the second floor, and does not regain its symmetry until it rises to the broad bracketed eaves, hipped roof and dormers. At 1619 North 9th Street, a classic foursquare corner bay hangs on to a large Craftsman house. It is this unique patchwork of styles and details that makes the periods blend together into a cohesive neighborhood.

The North Slope Historic District contains housing stock that dates from 1881 to the present. About 90 percent of the homes were built before 1955 and those that came after that date were constructed on locations where an older house was demolished. Within the district you will find a number of styles including the Stick Style, the Queen Anne, the American Foursquare, the Craftsman Style, and the Tudor Revival style. The following is a brief description of the predominant architectural styles found in the District.

One of the earliest and most distinctive styles found in the district is the Stick Style, a derivative of the Queen Anne style. This style is noted for its exterior surface decoration of wood framing which gives the expression of the inner structure of the building on the exterior. Most often found in the gable ends and upper stories, this "stick" work was usually a series of boards intersecting at right angles and applied over the clapboard surface to symbolize the structural skeleton. Sometimes diagonal boards were incorporated to resemble half timbering. Other details include a profusion of jigsaw and lath work in wood, surfaces divided into panels and a frequent use of projecting turned knobs as a single or repeated decoration. Examples of Stick Style found in the district are: 318 N I, 324 N I, 912 N I, 607 N K, 720 N K, 822 N M, 802 N J, 817 N J.

Many homes in the district were designed in or influenced by the Queen Anne style. The style emphasized vertical rather than horizontal proportions, and steeply pitched roofs and substantial chimneys play significant roles in the overall design. The Queen Anne style is distinguished by the use of a wide variety of elements such as towers or turrets, bay windows, overhangs and wall projections. Often stone or brick was used to highlight a first story of wood clapboard. The upper stories are often decorated with stucco or decorative-cut wood shingles. Other characteristics include predominant use of hipped roofs, decorative brick patterns or molded brick, stained or colored glass windowpanes, and an irregular versus symmetrical plan. Examples of Queen Anne style found in the district are: 408 N K, 1601 N 8th, 1021 N 5th, 903 N K, 301 N I, 424 N M, 701 N J.

The Craftsman Style, built in the period between 1905 and 1930, is very dominant in the district. Imported originally from India, characteristics that distinguish this style are low, broad, horizontal lines, deep covered porches with wide-pitched roofs, visible structural elements like rafter tails and knee brackets, and solid porch columns. The style was usually built to blend in and extend the natural environment as much as possible. Wood siding was stained or painted earth tones, and local stone was often used for foundations or columns. Interiors are notable for their exposed beams and natural woodwork. Examples of the more decorative Craftsman dwellings found in the district are: 515, 520, 718 N Ainsworth. Other Craftsman examples are: 809 N J, 810 N J, 1018 N 5th, 1002 N L, 919 N Ainsworth, 515 N Ainsworth.

Another style found in the District is the Colonial Revival. As one of the most popular architectural styles in American history, Colonial Revival refers to a rebirth of interest in early English and Dutch houses of the Atlantic seaboard. Within the period you will find several sub-styles including the Cape Cod, the Williamsburg and the Dutch Colonial. Pure Colonial Revival homes are defined as symmetrically balanced one or two story homes of wood or brick. Typical details include multi-paned windows, modillioned cornices, pediment doorways and side gable roofs with cornice returns. Examples of the Colonial Revival found in the district are: 1315 N 5, 908 N M, 815 N M St.

Popular in the 1920s and 1930s, the Dutch Colonial style, a sub-style of the Colonial Revival, is readily identifiable in the district by its unique gambrel roof. However, under the roof is a formal Georgian Colonial design complete with a formal room layout and classically inspired details. A number of these styles of home were built in the District and are found at: 414 N Sheridan, 702 N K, 724 N I, 1114 N 11th, 1101 N 5th

Also located in the district are numerous examples of the American Foursquare design. As a type, rather than a style, the foursquare can be clothed in Craftsman, Spanish, or Colonial detailing. The form is distinguished as a two-story rectangular dwelling, usually square, but sometimes rectangular. The foursquare has a hip or pyramidal roof and sometimes boasts a variety of dormers on one or more facades. Examples of the American Foursquare found in the district are: 510 N Sheridan, 420 N Sheridan, 1509 N 5th, 710 N Cushman, 517 N Ainsworth, 1409 N Steele.

The Tudor style home takes its cues from the late medieval English buildings of the early 16th century, and the designs range in execution from the simple cottage of a common farmer to the grand manor house of the wealthy English gentry. The American Tudor style arrived during the 1920s and 30s as a revival of the English designs. Steep roofs, casement windows, heavy chimneys and half-timbered gables appear on most Tudor homes. Examples of Tudor Revival style found in the district are: 708 N I, 1023 N Cushman, 818 N Ainsworth, 1015 N 11th, 1506 N 10th.

Within the North Slope Historic District you will also find a variety of homes that don't fit easily within a stylistic category. They may be large or small, but are usually frame constructed with a pitched or gabled roof. Examples of these homes are found at: 712 N Sheridan, 1305 N 8th, 1508 N 7th, 1202 N 9th and 714 N Cushman.

Accessory Structures, Garages:

Ancillary structures are another category of building found throughout the District. Almost all of the detached garages are located in the alleys, and there is about 1 garage for every 3 houses. Most are gable-roofed and wood-framed. Usually they are clad with horizontal clapboard or drop siding, and often include one or two fixed pane windows. Flat-roofed garages are also found in the District.

- Many new garages have been built in the District, as the older garages were not big enough for the longer cars of today and were replaced with garages with roll-up doors and clad in T-1-11 plywood. The apartment houses have long carports extending along the entire alley behind the apartments. A large number of garages have been creatively altered, many times, since 1950. Typical changes include additions of carports, attachment to house or to one another, installation of new garage doors, and new siding.

Apartment Houses:

Many of the apartment houses in the District were designed by prominent Tacoma architects. For example: The Kellogg Apartments, 3-story, brick building built in 1908, was designed by Darmer & Cutting. The contractor was G. Frier.

A 3 story, multi-family apartment dwelling was designed in the Italianate Style and built in 1913. It is located at 417 N L St. Mrs. D. P. Wheeler, Bldr, J. E. Reeder, Contr.

Annobee Apartments at 319 N I St. is a three-story multi-family apartment structure designed in the Italianate Style. Oscar B. Clow, bldr, C. F. Dandson, contr. c.1924

In the late 1940s and early 1950s, many one-story clinker brick apartments were built. An example is 601 N J St. built in 1951. A few of these are L shaped with courtyards in the center of the L. These clinker brick apartments are considered historic-contributing. An example of an L shaped clinker brick apartment is located at 702 N L St.

Many two-story apartment buildings were built in the District after 1955. The city of Tacoma changed zoning in this year and inexpensive home prices allowed builders to demolish the older homes to build apartments.

Churches:

There are three prominent churches in the District and several smaller ones. St. Patrick's Catholic Church (1906), Immanuel Presbyterian Church (1908), and Christ Episcopal Church (1969) are the largest ones.

Others:

Commercial: A small commercial element has always had a presence in the District. Today there are only 27 buildings with commercial use. The "corner store" still exists in its historic location. There are still professional offices and they, like all but three commercial businesses, have moved to either Division Ave. or N I St. The service station, historic Richfield Oil Service Station, c 1937, still sells gas under a new name; however, its "service" element was converted to a small grocery store.

There is still a laundry, although in a different location. Originally the laundry was called the Samuel Glenn Laundry and was located at 1006 N I St. The Samuel Glenn Laundry opened in 1910 and immediately met with controversy. A 1911 article states that "Judge Clifford Rules That Plant Shall Shut Down Completely", and continues to say that so long as the plant runs, noises and smoke will necessarily trouble neighbors." The laundry was to close its doors a month from the date of the ruling.

Integrity and District Boundaries

Individual historic properties within the district vary in their retention of their historic character. The integrity for each property was weighed by assessing the type, extent, and alteration in the context of the District's own houses, and in the context of similar properties in the greater Tacoma area. Alterations to roof configuration, major additions, and enclosures of front porches, result in the greatest detrimental effect to integrity of design. Alterations to windows and siding, depending on degree and cumulative effect, also have detrimental effect on integrity of materials and workmanship. In general, if a small change was made, that alone does not destroy integrity.

"Historic Contributing" are properties that were built during the historic period of significance (1873-1955) and retain sufficient integrity in location, materials, design and setting, workmanship, feeling and/or association to convey a sense of history. The overall ability of the property to "read" as a construct of the historic period was the determining factor in ranking.

- Total number of Historic Contributing properties in the District = 698 or 73%

"Historic Non-Contributing" are properties that were built during the historic period of significance (1873-1955), but do not exhibit sufficient historic integrity in location, materials, design and setting, workmanship, feeling and/or association to convey a sense of history.

- Total number of Historic Non-Contributing in the District = 145 or 16%

"Non-Historic, Non-Contributing" are properties that were constructed after the period of significance (after 1955) for the district.

- Total number of Non-Historic Non-Contributing properties in the District = 85 or 10%

"Vacant" are parcels of land that is undeveloped. Most of the time the vacant properties in the District are yard space of an adjacent house.

- Total number of Vacant properties in the District = 8 or 1%

Accessory Structures

Accessory Structures are structures that are not the primary structure on a property. They usually are garages or sheds and many show signs of being converted stables. Some accessory structures are secondary houses built on the side or rear of the lot.

Historic Contributing Accessory Structures are properties that were built during the historic period of significance (1873-1955) and retain sufficient integrity in location, materials, design and setting, workmanship, feeling and/or association to convey a sense of history. period was the determining factor in ranking. In the case of garages, the type of door was not considered a factor in classification.

- Total number of Historic Contributing Accessory Structures properties in the District = 211 or 59%
- Total number of Historic Non-Contributing Accessory Structures in the District = 36 or 10%
- Total number of Non-Historic Non-Contributing properties in the District = 110 or 31%

Site ID#: B812

Architect/Builder/Contractor:

Style: Substation

Parcel Number(s): 2031170010

Classification: Non-Historic, Non-Contributing

Description: The Tacoma Power Substation contains a number of transformers used to convert the power from the transmission lines to power useable by the distribution lines going to the homes and businesses in the area. The exterior consists of a section of 6 ft high chain-link fencing alternating with concrete wall fences. Access to the property is from N 2nd St. or from N I St.

Cultural Data: The Stadium Substation, as Tacoma Power calls it, is located on a property that Tacoma City Light obtained in 1951. Tacoma City Light purchased a vacant lot for a "Distribution Yard"; the city was growing and needed more electrical capacity. The term, "Distribution Yard" gave way to "Substation" and the Substation remained in active service until late 1983, according to information obtained from Tacoma Power. Then the method of power distribution changed in Tacoma and the Substation was modernized to accomplish the new techniques.

Historic Name: Signor A. J. Foli Home

Built: 1900

Site ID#: P1319

Architect/Builder/Contractor: Cornell Bros., contractor

Style: Queen Anne

Parcel Number(s): 2034270060

Classification: Historic Contributing

Description: A 2 1/2 story, multi-family residence designed in the Queen Anne Style. The main roof is a side-facing gable with a shed-roof dormer to the right side. There is a two story, five-panel bay window to the far left edge. There are contemporary picture windows in three of the panels. To the far upper right is a small double-hung window. At the lower right a shallow-pitched porch roof, supported on iron columns. There is a door at the inside panel of the bay. To the right is a picture window. On the right side of the structure at the upper level is a large window set in from the main wall. A bay window is visible to the far right, and a shallow wall extension at the left. The house is clad in asphalt "brick" siding.

Cultural Data: Home of Signor A. J. Foli. The house was estimated to cost $6,000 and was described as having "...a stone basement, and will be two stories high..." Signor Foli's real name was James Allen Foley, and he was a "celebrated opera singer" who spent his summers in Tacoma with his sisters, Bessie Walker and Helen Hargear. Foli built the homes of both sisters, as well as the above address. Foli, considered "...one of the world's great artists made his home in England for thirty years or more, and gained a reputation as "...the idol of London". His most noted performance was in the oratorio of Elijah. He was an avid fisherman, and spent much of his free time while in Tacoma pursuing this activity.

Foli contracted pneumonia and died shortly afterwards, in 1889. Later, much publicity was given regarding the settling of his estate between his sisters and nieces. Mrs. Bessie Walker filed a suit against her nieces, Lillian and Bessie Hargear, "...charging them with having concealed a portion of the property." Apparently Lillian Hargear was entrusted with various stocks and securities from her Uncle, but was refusing to surrender them at the time of his death. The resolution to this conflict is not known. Style: American Foursquare

Classification: Historic Contributing

Description: A single family residence designed in the American Foursquare Style. The main roof is a pyramidal hip with decorative brackets at the eave line. There is a brick chimney centered at the peak. There are hipped dormers on two sides, and the dormers have unique wall construction with sides that look like piers. Five-over-one windows are in the dormers. At the far right and left edges (5th Street facade) there are one-over-one, double hung windows, and in the middle there are small one-over-one, double hung windows. A hipped porch roof extends across the 5th Street side, supported on round, tapered columns, and wraps around a portion of the Sheridan facade. A gabled roof with decorative wood designs on the gable face is set at a 45 degree angle to the corner. The main entrance is located to the right side of the 5th Street facade. There large one-over-one, double hung windows at the front corner. The structure is clad in horizontal wood clapboard.

Cultural Data: Home of former Governor Ernest Lister, who at the time of construction was in partnership with his brother Alfred in a company that provided Real Estate, Loans and Insurance, located at 120 S. 10th. Ernest Lister came to Tacoma from Halifax, Yorkshire, England in 1884 with his family. His father, J. H. Lister, was a pioneer iron founder in Tacoma and, after attending business school for a short time, Ernest became an iron molder. At the age of 23 Lister served on Tacoma's city council and a few years later served under Governor John Rogers as chairman of the state board of control. Lister married Alma Thornton, originally from Oregon, in 1893, and they had one daughter and one son.

Lister next founded the Lister Manufacturing Company (lumber), with his brother Albert. At some point he returned his attentions to politics, and after a "whirlwind" campaign, where "...eleven speeches a day was not an uncommon program..." he was elected as the first democratic governor of the state in 12 years, in 1913. Lister was elected to a second term in 1917, where he is listed as a Republican this time. During the state legislative session of 1919, Lister suffered a "...virtual collapse..." and was ordered by doctors to retreat. He was moved to the hospital in Steilacoom, but worsened and was brought to the hospital in Tacoma where he died, at only 48 years of age. The cause of death was heart and kidney disease. Sadly, Alma Lister died only five years later, their daughter Florence died in 1925 at the age of 30, and their son, John died suddenly of spinal meningitis at the age of 27. Their home, described as Colonial in design, was estimated to cost $3,000. A later article states that the house is "...finished throughout in natural Washington fir..." and the cost at completion was $5,000. Proctor & Farrell, architects. 1903

Architect/Builder/Contractor: Charles A. Bartz

Style: Queen Anne

Parcel Number(s): 2035300060

Classification: Historic Contributing

Description: A single family residence designed in the Queen Anne Style. The main roof is a pyramidal hip with flared eaves. There is a hipped dormer centered over the front and a brick chimney to the right rear. At the upper right, there is a curved (round) 2-story bay with one-over-one, double hung windows. To the immediate left is a small square leaded-glass window, and further to the left is a one-over-one, double hung window. A hipped porch roof extends across the front and is supported on square columns. The entrance door is to the middle right of the porch, and there are two large one-over-one, double hung windows to the left. The structure is clad in horizontal wood clapboard.

Cultural Data: Home of Charles A. Bartz, owner and contractor, prop. Bartz & Davis, Tacoma Millwork Supply Co. The house was estimated to cost $3,000 to build, and cost in actuality $4,500 upon completion. The interior of the house was described as colonial in style, and downstairs rooms were finished in "...golden oak, with imitation birch floors." The house had nine rooms. An April, 1918 article tells of a burglary at the home, where the thieves "...carried off a cake, some sardines, bread and butter, about a dozen cigars, a box of cigarettes, a string of child's pearl beads among other items. 1904

Style: American Foursquare

Parcel Number(s): 2035300070

Classification: Historic Contributing

Description: A single family residence designed in the American Foursquare Style. The main roof is a hip with flared eaves, and there is a hipped dormer centered over the front. The dormer has a pair of one-over-one, double hung windows. A brick chimney is constructed to the right side. At the upper level, there is a pair of one-over-one, double hung windows in the center and narrow windows with criss-crossed mullions to the right and left sides. A hipped porch roof extends across the lower level, and is supported on round, tapered columns. Over the entrance is a shallow front-facing gable extension. To the far right is a large picture window, and to the left is a narrow stained-glass window. The structure is clad in horizontal wood clapboard.

Cultural Data: Elias Messinger was born in Denver, Iowa in 1856. His family were farmers, and he worked the land with his father as a young boy. At 16, Elias worked in a hardware store, and two years later he joined his father's flour milling enterprise. He came West at the age of 20, finding himself "dead broke" in Portland in 1875. He was employed in an iron foundry for a time in Portland, then moved near Amity, Oregon, where he taught school for three terms. He met his wife, Adeline Ladd, in Amity and they were married in 1878. They had one son and two daughters.

On July 1, 1887, the Messinger's arrived in Tacoma, just in time to witness the last spike being driven into the final rails of the Northern Pacific line. Elias took a job with Hunt & Mottet as a shipping clerk and became President of the company in 1906, when Mr. Mottet retired. Original architect, builder and contractor unknown. 1904

Historic Name: North Slope Historic District Park

Built: 2002

Site ID#: U1017

Architect/Builder/Contractor:

Style: North Slope Historic District Park

Parcel Number(s): 2038210080

Classification: Non-Historic, Non-Contributing

Description: The Park consists of a grass border along the streets, trees and shrubs near the play area. The playground equipment is located in the area where Tacoma Power had their transformers, and was designed especially for tots. There are still some of the old signs and fencing left over from the Substation days.

The North Slope Historic District Park was dedicated, on June 8, 2002, to the memory of Valerie Sivinski, Tacoma's Historic Officer at the time the North Slope Historic District was started.

Cultural Data: The North Slope Historic District Park is located on a property that Tacoma City Light obtained in Nov., 1951. Tacoma City Light purchased a vacant lot for a "Distribution Yard"; the city was growing and needed more electrical capacity. A photograph taken in November, 1953, shows transformers with connecting power lines indicating that the "yard" was ready for service.

The term, "Distribution Yard" gave way to "Substation" and the K St. Substation remained in active service until late 1983, according to information obtained from Tacoma Power. When the method of power distribution changed and the K St. Substation was decommissioned, it sat vacant for years with the transformers still in place, but disconnected. After removing all the power equipment, the lot was still left vacant, on purpose, giving Tacoma City Light time to verify that the land was not contaminated and could be put to other use.

The local residents noted that Tacoma Power (the new name, since 1989, for Tacoma City Light) had a vacant lot and wondered what would become of it. There were many discussions on a method, any method, that would prevent another apartment complex from being built in the middle of the North Slope Historic District. It was Kelly Halligan who suggested a "Pocket Park". That sounded like an excellent idea, but no one could figure out a way to purchase the property. Thea Foss bond money became the solution and source of funds for the purchase of the park.

At last, on July 26, 2000, Tacoma Power approved the sale of the property for $30,000. The City of Tacoma became the owner of the property in April, 2001. With the city owning the land, and an agreement that Metro Parks would maintain the park, the North Slope Historic District Park was built. 2002

Cultural Data: Home of Rev. Spencer S. and Rose D. Sulliger, supt. Puget Sound Methodist Conference. The house was estimated to cost $3,000. Sulliger was born in Ottawa, Ontario in 1854, and initially pursued a career in the pharmaceutical business until entering the ministry. In 1891, he was transferred to the Port Townsend. He served as the district superintendent of the conference from 1893-1917. During the "Mexican Border Trouble" in 1916, Sulliger served as a chaplain in the National Guard, and went with a regiment to Calexico, California. In addition to his ministry, Sulliger was a avid rose lover and he organized "The Rosarians" in Bellingham in 1904. He served many times as a judge for rose shows all over the State. Rose Sulliger taught school in Bellingham for several years and met Spencer Sulliger there when he held a three-year pastorate. She and her husband had one daughter.

He attended evening school to learn drawing and modeling for a time, then traveled in Europe working primarily in coal mines in the hopes to earn enough money to return to France. He learned the machinist trade during this time, traveling as a salesman throughout Europe. He and his wife eventually came to the United States after friends in Seattle wrote describing the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition that was being planned for the Pacific NW. The Lances came to Seattle and decided to settle in the area. They moved to Lakebay in 1921, when Gaston purchased a carpenter shop on Street Helen's Avenue in Tacoma. Lance's partnership with Russell was his first in the area, however, their firm was relatively short-lived. R. Cresco, builder. 1919

Architect/Builder/Contractor:

Style: Ranch

Parcel Number(s): 2033180040

Classification: Historic Contributing

Description: A 1/2 story, single-family residence designed in the Tudor Cottage Style. The house is a split-level; the lower garage has been converted to living space. There is an aluminum frame sliding glass door and a window in the place of a garage door. At the 2nd level, there is a large rectangular window to the left, where the structure extends forward from the side wing, and a second large rectangular window centered on the face of the side wing. The roof is a side-facing gable, with a front-facing gable extension. There is a brick chimney located to the left of the front gable. The exterior is clad in brick, except at the lower level which is clad in horiz. wood siding.

Cultural Data: Home of Dr. Samuel L. and Susan Blair, Physician and Surgeon Dr. Blair maintained a practice in Tacoma for nearly 50 years, arriving here in 1906. Blair grew up on a "wheat and stock farm in Illinois", and received his education in Chicago. His first patients-in private practice were in Trinidad, Colorado. Here, Blair had the distinction of having operated on notorious train robber, Blackjack, who after attempting to "hold up a Colorado and Southern train which had recent experience with gunmen" was not by the conductor. The prisoner was brought to Dr. Blair by the sheriff. Apparently the man's arm was so badly damaged that an amputation was necessary, and Dr. Blair relates in a newspaper article, there was nothing for it but to amputate the arm, so I told him (Blackjack) said no, but there was very little he could say about it and I took the arm off. For all our efforts, he was hanged shortly after in New Mexico, for train robbery carried the death penalty in those days..." Blair and his wife first ran the Tacoma Private Sanitarium, which occupied the present site of the Buckley-King Mortuary. Here Mrs. Blair would often act as her husband's anesthetist. Later he received a contract to care for employees of the Tacoma Smelter, which he held for 10 years. At that time Blair was paid 50 cents a month for each of the 500 workers, and received $10 to deliver a baby. Blair was still seeing patients occasionally at 90 years of age. Built: 1900

Site ID#: I1224

Architect/Builder/Contractor:

Style: Residential Vernacular

Parcel Number(s): 2042180010

Classification: Historic Non-Contributing

Description: Structure was built in Gig Harbor and transported by barge across to Tacoma. The main roof is a pyramidal gable with a series of shed-roofed dormers to the sides and front. To the left side is gabled, two story square extension. The face of this gable has decorative stickwork and a single window. At the second level there are two one-over-one double-hung windows, and to the far right is a pair of the same. A hipped porch roof extends across the front, supported on round columns. There are two one-over-one, double-hung windows to the left side, and the entrance is located to the right of center.

Cultural Data: Home of Mrs. Margaret Hall, widow of Frank Hall. Built originally in Gig Harbor's Millville (Harborview Drive) it was considered that city's "largest and most pretentious dwelling". But Margaret Hall, desiring to be closer to her daughter, Mrs. W.W. Powell (who lived at 1118 North I), and convinced that her home "could not be disposed of to good advantage where it stood", decided to move her house by barge from Gig Harbor to Tacoma in 1904. As the structure was being shifted onto two scows for transportation, "a portion of the building dropped off into the water and the house was badly wrecked." The portion lost was a woodshed and upper apartment and James M. Nichols, "...a member of the contracting firm, stated last night that while the house was seriously injured, he thought he could repair it and set it together so that it would be all right." The contractors had initially attempted to move the house with the furniture inside, however, after the accident, which did not damage any of the furniture, it was decided to send all the furnishings over by steamer separately. The transportation of the house was completed successfully. Original architect, builder and contractor unknown.

Description: A 2 story public church designed in the Tudor Revival Style. The building is designed, in plan, with a central spine and two rectangular wings at either end. The main entrance is located nearest the K St. side. The roof is gabled and has little to no overhang. The gable face has stick work and stucco construction common to Tudor designs. The windows are set in pairs and have stone headers. The foundation is stone and the remainder of the structure is brick. At the far right corner, K St. side, is constructed a square tower with a connected top. Tall narrow windows are placed in the upper 2/3. Below is an entrance, which is arched, and the brick arches gradually recede back towards the doorway opening. The central spine has five brick piers extending the full height of the structure.

Cultural Data: Property was purchased from Tacoma Land Company in 1889 and ownership has not changed since that initial purchase.

Description: The main roof is gabled which has returned eaves, and there is a large dormer extension to the left side. There is a large window at the upper level. Windows extend across the lower façade but are obscured by foliage. The structure's entrance is not visible. The house is clad in gypcrete siding.

Cultural Data: Home of Overton G. Ellis, Ellis & Fletcher, Lawyers, 510-12 Fidelity Building. Overton Gentry Ellis was born in 1860 in Nodaway County, Missouri. He attended the University of Missouri and went on to Law School at the University of Virginia. He married Jennie Wilhite of Kansas City, Mo., in 1894 and they came to Tacoma around that time. They had a son and daughter. Ellis practiced law with several different partners, namely a Fletcher and Evans. He would eventually become Chief justice of the Washington State Supreme Court, in 1910.

Mrs. Jennie Wilhite Ellis was born in Leavenworth, Kansas, and grew up in Kansas City, Missouri. She attended school here, and later taught in the public schools before her marriage. Mrs. Ellis was active in civic affairs, and was particularly interested in government and politics. She played an important role in the founding of the Tacoma Presidents' Council, the Tacoma Chapter of the English-speaking Union and the Tacoma World Affairs Council and was a member of the League of Nations Association and the United Nations Association. When women were granted the right to vote, Mrs. Ellis was appointed to the Democratic national Committee, serving from 1920-1925. A newspaper article states that Mrs. Ellis, and others had centered national attention on Tacoma with a staunch fight for the city's first pure food ordinance." For two years, in 1912 and 1913, she was a member of the national executive committee of the League to Enforce Peace, "a group that drew up the document later adopted as charter of the League of Nations."

Overton G. Ellis, Jr., spent his life as a foreign service officer for the Department of State. He held many interesting positions. He was a graduate of the University of Washington and served with the American Express bank at Hong Kong as cashier for three years, and another three years with the same bank in Athens. He passed state department examinations in 1931 and "...entered a school for consular men at Washington...". He ranked "...next to highest man among 350 taking the examination." He was appointed as vice consul of the United States at Budapest, and in 1936 was appointed to the same position in Singapore. Cornell Bros., contractor. 1901

Description: The main roof is hipped, with a gabled extension to the right-side, and a gabled two-story bay window to the front left. There is a brick chimney to the left side. The front gable has a rectangular window in the face, and the face is clad in decorative wood shingle. The gable face overhangs the bay, supported on decorative brackets. The side panels of the bay all have narrow rectangular windows and the center panels have large picture windows with narrow upper transoms. To the right upper level is a single rectangular window. At the main level, the entrance is sheltered by a shed-roof supported on turned columns. There is a small gabled roof centered on the shed. Spindlework runs along the upper front porch. The structure is clad in wood press-board shingle.

Cultural Data: Home of and Elias Floyd Messinger, Pres. Hunt & Mottet Hardware. Messinger was born in Denver, Iowa in 1856. He spent his first 12 years working with his father on their family farm and attending local schools. His first job was in a hardware store in Waterloo, Iowa, where he remained for two years. At this time his father operated a mill, and Elias took a job packing flour there for the next three years. In 1875, he was "afflicted by western fever", and at the age of twenty, came to Portland, Oregon, "dead broke". In Oregon he worked in an iron foundry, taught school for several terms, worked on a ranch and finally, in 1878, started his own grain business in Amity, Oregon. This same year he married Adeline Elizabeth Ladd. They had one son and two daughters. Again, Elias was tempted by the rumors of opportunity in another City, and in 1887 he brought his family to Tacoma. He timed his arrival with the celebration surrounding the driving of the last spike on the Northern Pacific Railroad. He began work as a shipping clerk at the Hunt & Mottet Company, wholesale and retail hardware dealers. By 1906 Messinger had succeeded Mr. Mottet as President of the company. In addition to his business activities, Messinger was involved in numerous civic causes, namely the Tacoma Boosters (Commercial Club), the Y.M.C.A. Original architect, builder and contractor unknown. 1890

There is a lower level garage to the left. There is a brick chimney to the right rear of the main roof. The structure is clad with wood pressboard shingle.

Cultural Data: Home of Charles Drury, tailor. Drury was born in Lincoln county, England in 1866. At 16, he arrived in the United States, having apprenticed as a tailor beginning at age 12. He settled for two years near Minneapolis to farm, then continued west to Tacoma. He started his own tailoring business, which grew to a point where he had opened additional shops in Seattle and Portland. In 1892 he married Nettie B. Rand, of Iowa. The Drury's traveled 16 times across the Atlantic to buy stock for his stores. He toured the world, via Russia, and enjoyed telling stories from his travels. An article notes, "In one journey over the sea, they toured England and countries on the continent covering 5,550 miles with their motor car." Drury served on the school board for six years, from 1902-1906, and helped to plan the renovation of the old hotel into Stadium high school. Nettie Drury was very involved in the First Methodist church, a member of a local chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Illema club and the Fine Arts Studio club. To the right of the bay is a similar window configuration, below which are decorative wood panels. A shallow-roofed porch extends across the front of the house and is supported on double round columns. To the right of the door is a pair of four-over-one windows and to the left is a large rectangular window with a narrow transom above. The house is clad in horizontal wood siding. There is a narrow rectangular window in the upper face of the gabled dormer.

Cultural Data: Home of Carl A. Darmer, owner and architect. C. August Darmer was born in Stralsund, Germany in 1858, and attended Hoexter College and apprenticed for two years in the carpenter and building trade. Due to lingering weakness in an arm that had been broken, he was forced to leave his apprenticeship, he traveled for several years in England, Africa and Australia, and came to in 1882 to San Francisco. He arrived in Tacoma in 1884 and took a position with architect William Farrell, where he remained for the next ten years. He formed his own firm, Darmer & Cutting after that time. Darmer is considered one of Tacoma's finest designers, responsible for such structures as First Presbyterian church, the former People's Store, and the F.S. Harmon & Co. Building. Darmer married Sophia Schulz, also from Germany, in 1885. They had one son and one daughter. The Darmer residence had "...four rooms on first floor, part has hardwood floors, very fine built-in buffet and electrical fixtures, fireplace, concrete basement.". An article relates a feud between Darmer and his neighbor, Karl Thompson, whose "...dog is at the bottom of the trouble, for, according to Mr. Darmer, the dog as an especial fondness for Mr. Darmer's legs and on two occasions has partaken thereof." Darmer secured a warrant charging Thompson "...with keeping a vicious dog and recites that on June 7, when Mr. Darmer was passing the Thompson residence, the dog sallied forth and bit Mr. Darmer severely on the leg, without cause or provocation whatever." Thompson refused to tie up his dog and Darmer took the case to court. Miller & Black, contractor. 1898

Cultural Data: Original occupant unknown, George W. and Eunice C. Miller (1935), vice-president Winthrop Motor Co. The residence was estimated to cost $3,500. An interesting fact is that the house was apparently the childhood home of actress Marjie Millar. A 1935 article pictures Marjie as a child, under the title, "Tacoma's Own Shirley", and she does bear a close likeness to Shirley Temple. Marjie won the look-alike contest, after competing with 200 other contestants. Her prize was a Harter dancing scholarship, and studio portraits. Growing up in Tacoma she was heavily involved in local theatre productions, and then in 1950 moved to Hollywood to pursue modeling, radio and television.

This house is clad in gypcrete siding.

Cultural Data: Home of Gwin G. Hicks, occupation unlisted. The residence was completed at a cost of $8,000. The house was designed with nine rooms, and featured "two large fireplaces in the living and dining rooms and a large billiard room in the attic...", as well as "quarter-sawn oak" finishing on the main floor, and birds eye maple in the kitchen. Colonel Gwin Hicks was a native of Olympia, his grandfather having been first to arrive in the Northwest. Involved in real estate and building in the "early boom days, but like many other went broke for it." He worked as a collector for the IRS for nearly 25 years, and then moved to California where he was "fortunate in oil speculation". He returned to Tacoma in 1909 a wealthy man, and purchased his brother's home (923 North M), where he would later build a "finer home for himself and family". On the site were locust trees planted by him 20 years before, which he claims were "the first and original locust trees brought to the Northwest by his grandfather 60 years ago." Built: 1905

Site ID#: S417

Architect/Builder/Contractor:

Style: Queen Anne

Parcel Number(s): 2034270020

Classification: Historic Contributing

Description: A single family residence designed in the Queen Anne Style. The main roof is a front-facing gable with returned eaves and a side dormer to the right. The upper portion of the main gable front is set out from the main wall. There is a pair of one-over-one, double hung windows with decorative shutters at the upper floor. There is a brick chimney to the left side. A hip-roofed porch supported on round columns extends across the main floor. The door is located right of center, and to the far right there is a small square window. To the left is a large grouping of windows; a large central window divided by a single vertical mullion, flanked by two one-over-one, double hung narrower window. The structure is clad in wood shingle.

Cultural Data: Home of Edwin R. Ray, a printer whose company was located at 113 S. 13th Street Ray came to Tacoma after reading a promotional letter by Allen C. Mason that had been printed in the Street Louis Globe-Democrat. Born in Lexington, Tennessee in 1866, his family moved back to their home state of Kentucky when he was still a small child. Ray's father was a Baptist minister and operated a paper, "The American Baptist". Edwin learned the printing trade in his father's office. His formal schooling was cut short by illness, and he would later say that the education he received in the print shop was the "best of its kind as far as it goes." When he arrived in Tacoma, 24 years old, he worked on the Morning Globe, one of Tacoma's earlier papers, but started his own print shop in 1892. He and his wife Marguerite had one son. An October 1905 Ledger article describes an unusual burglary at the Ray home in which the suspect broke into the home while the owners were out of town, turned on all the lights and made off with such valuables as one pair of (old) socks, two pairs of scissors, one box of tooth powder and one copy of Bryant's poems. The "plunder" was discovered a week later with a vast collection of stolen items, including "...socks and stockings enough to start a store- hundreds of them..." The thief had hidden everything in a "dense thicket" near L and South 7th streets. Original architect, builder and contractor unknown. 1904

Historic Name: Roland E. Marie B. Borhek Home

Built: 1921

Site ID#: S715

Architect/Builder/Contractor: Roland E. Borhek, architect

Style: Tudor Cottage

Parcel Number(s): 2037270030

Classification: Historic Contributing

Description: A single family residence designed in the Tudor Cottage Style. The main roof is a side-facing gable with a prominent front-facing gable extension to the left side and a shed-roof dormer at the right. In the dormer are three multi-paned windows. Near the peak of the front extension is a multi-paned window with decorative shutters. A shed-roof covers the porch. To the left is a multi-paned window with decorative shutters. To the right of the entrance is a group of three multi-paned windows. There is a multi-paneled bay extension to the right rear. The house is clad in horizontal wood siding.

Cultural Data: Home of Roland E. and Marie B. Borhek. Borhek was an architect whose office was in the Puget Sound Bank Building. It is significant to note that Borhek built on the site of land belonging to Job Carr, and his new home was constructed after a two-story frame house of Carr's was torn down (this Carr farm house should not be confused with the original log cabin Carr built in Old Town when he arrived in Tacoma).

Roland Borhek was born in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. He studied drafting in technical school and worked in Boston in the firm of A. Warren Gould. When Gould decided to come West to Seattle in 1905, Borhek came along. They would go on to design the American Savings Bank and Empire buildings, some of the earliest reinforced concrete structures in the U.S.

In 1908, Borhek took a position with the firm of Heath & Twitchell, and while with them designed the National Realty building and the First Church of Christ Science. He opened his own office in 1910. His firm designed the Walker Apartments, the Colonial Theater, the Puget Sound Bank building, and the Rialto Theater. Borhek was president of the Tacoma Architects Association for 10 years, and served as vice-president of the A.I.A. in 1926. At one time, Borhek was employed by the Tacoma School Board to develop a future building plan. He and his wife Marie had one son and one daughter. Roland E. Borhek, architect. 1920

PIERCE COUNTY, WASHINGTON

Narrative Statement of Significance:

Summary

Tacoma's North Slope Historic District is eligible for the National Register under Criterion A as a cohesive neighborhood that represents the broad pattern of the social and economic history of Tacoma. As such the district represents a cross culture of individuals, both famous and ordinary, whose skills and talents contributed to the development and growth of the city. The early residents included professionals, business proprietors, railroad employees, independent trade people, and celebrities, all living in a close knit neighborhood.

The district is also eligible under Criterion C as an area that embodies the distinctive characteristics of homes built in Tacoma from 1881 to 1955. Many of these dwellings represent the work of a master craftsmen and/or architect, and a majority of the resources possess high artistic values representing significant characteristics of architectural styles popular during the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

The homes in the North Slope Historic District are uniquely separated from surrounding neighborhoods by the street layout of the 1880s. The streets were laid out wide at Commencement Bay and narrow at the south end of the District where N Grant Ave. runs between Division Ave and N Steele St. While the District's homes are only part of Tacoma's rich historical treasure chest of historic homes, this area offers a high concentration of intact historic resources.

The settlement pattern and building styles are a direct reflection of the periods of national economic growth and stagnation as their dramatic fluctuations impacted Tacoma. Stylistic influences from the East Coast, Midwest, and California combine with local vernacular styles and material created a unique local appearance. The common influences and represented styles include Victorian and Stick style structures, the classic American Foursquare, the Craftsman style, and the California bungalow. Three waves of development, plus architectural and social trends, combined to create a neighborhood reflecting local history, character and diversity.

Period of Significance:

The period of significance for Tacoma's North Slope Historic District beginning in 1881, the date of the oldest extant houses in the District. By 1902, 25 percent of the houses in the District had been built and by 1914, one-half of the homes had been built. There were many additional homes added in the 1920s and by 1929, 78% of the homes had been built in the District. Building became a slow steady process after that and by 1955, 89 percent of all homes had been built.

After 1953 the number of new homes built each year started to decline, and by the end of 1955 homes that fit the form and feel of the "older" homes stopped. In 1955 that the City of Tacoma changed the zoning laws encouraging apartment houses to be built. As a result, many historic homes in the district were destroyed in the name of progress.

Criterion A:

Early History

Early in the 1850s, the tree-lined shores of Commencement Bay began to lure sawmill operators and loggers eager to provide lumber for the California Gold Rush, and quickly a tiny, dreary lumber-mill settlement grew at the mouth of the Puyallup River, on what is known today as Tacoma's Tide Flats. Tacoma officially began in 1852, when Nicholas Delin filed a Donation land claim at the head of Commencement Bay and built a small sawmill to supply local settlers with lumber. Many of his mill workers built cabins in the area around the mill.

The Donation Land Law of 1850 brought growth to the Oregon Territory (present day Washington State was a part of this territory). The law provided that 160 acres could be given to each settler. To obtain title, the settler had to cultivate his claim for four years. The Homestead Act passed Congress in May 1862, and provided that a settler could obtain title to 160 acres if he lived on the land and improved it. In addition, a settler could obtain title to 160 acres if he paid $1.25 per acre for the land, and by purchasing the land direct there was no residence requirement. The Homestead Act attracted thousands to the West.

Also influencing development in Tacoma was legislation signed by President Abraham Lincoln, on July 2, 1864, which offered up to 40 million acres of public land as reward for completion of a railroad between the Great Lakes and Puget Sound. Like previous laws, this one allowed public land to be purchased for $1.25 per acre. These land claims were for 320 acres to individual male settlers or 640 acres to married couples. Speculators were eager to stake claims and develop their homestead because word was out that a railroad was coming.

Job Carr, a Civil War veteran, was one such speculator. He arrived in Commencement Bay in November 1864, and filed a claim on the southern shore of Commencement Bay where it flows into Puget Sound. In 1865 his sons, Anthony and Howard, helped him build a cabin in present day Old Town. Carr had learned the Northern Pacific Railroad would be building a line to Puget Sound which would bring growth to the area, and he hoped his claim would be the terminus of the railroad.

Carr built his cabin and settled in to wait for the railroad. However, it was M. M. McCarver, a Portland promoter that got real estate development started in Tacoma. McCarver promoted his new "Tacoma City" to the railroad, and sold lots that brought in residents.

During this time, speculators were still unsure of the location for the "end" of the railroad and had to wait until 1873 to learn that Tacoma was selected as the terminus of the transcontinental Northern Pacific Railroad. Unfortunately for Carr and McCarver, the railroad stopped two miles short of McCarver's "Tacoma City". Instead the railroad started its own city, called "New Tacoma". This left McCarver and his supporters high and dry. The Railroad selected the New Tacoma site because of the large accumulation of property and long stretch of waterfront that a group of shrewd developers had managed to assemble just south of the fledgling community of Tacoma City.

Once the ending site was chosen, the Northern Pacific Railroad engaged an aggressive campaign to attract investors and working families from the East and Mid-west. The Tacoma Land Company, headquartered in the Northern Pacific Railroad Building, posted invitations advertising:

"If you want a home or an investment ... GO TO TACOMA, because ... Tacoma is at the head of Puget Sound, the Mediterranean of America"... Tacoma will be the shipping port for all the wheat raised in eastern Washington and much of Oregon ... Tacoma is in the heart of the finest timber in the world ... Tacoma's climate is excellent...."

Land speculators, as well as every type of businessman and entrepreneurs began to move into the bustling railroad town along Commencement Bay where the rails ended and wharves and mills quickly proliferated. As a result, Tacoma rapidly developed as an important point of shipment for the Pacific Northwest's vast untapped natural resources (and eventually the many agricultural products of the interior) to destinations along the West Coast and to the far off Orient and South Pacific. The city's importance expanded exponentially when the railroad tracks were finally completed to St. Paul, Minnesota in 1887, connecting Tacoma with all points East.

Land speculation in Tacoma led to the platting of residential lots far in advance of the market and McCarver, after hearing that he lost his bid to have his city become the ending point of the railroad, shifted his focus on the North Slope becoming a residential neighborhood. Quickly he hired a civil engineer to survey the property that he had purchased from Job Carr. Carr's sons, Howard and Anthony ran the lines and the survey was soon completed. The street plat for this area was laid out starting parallel to the waterfront of Commencement Bay, and continuing up the hill. When the plat for "New Tacoma" was completed, the streets followed a north-south, east-west grid making a 45-degree offset in the previously laid out area. The offset remains today and uniquely defines Tacoma's North Slope Historic District.

Soon Tacoma City became known as Old Town, and the area became a working class neighborhood occupied by fishermen, longshoremen and mill workers who patronized the many saloons found there. The North Slope area was considered part of "New Tacoma" became the middle class neighborhood. Old Town, incorporated in 1875 and New Tacoma defined its limits in 1883. Then in 1886 when Tacoma submitted its territorial charter, the two cities joined together and became "Tacoma".

Property Ownership

The area of the bounded by the North Slope Historic District, first belonged to Job Carr, his son Howard Carr, and James W. King. These three had the original homestead claims for almost all of the property in the District.

- Job Carr's homestead claim, has a sale date of 4/27/1868 and was recorded 5/15/1872. This was a donation claim for 160 acres and an "excess" cash claim for 6.31 acres. Carr paid $10 for the first 160 acres and $1.25 per acre for the excess. A copy of the record books from that time show the total cost of $17.88 3/4! Job Carr's farm house was built on this site and known at that time as Job Carr's Hill.
- James W. King's homestead claim, had a date of sale of 8/4/1868 and was recorded 5/15/1869. This was a cash purchase of $1.25 per acre for 160 acres, for a total cost of $200.00.
- Howard Carr's homestead claim, has a date of sale of 8/17/1868 and was recorded 5/15/1869. This was a cash purchase of $1.25 per acre for 160 acres, for a total cost of $200.00.

Job Carr's farmhouse was located at the present day address of 715 N Sheridan. Roland Borhek, an architect, who replaced Carr's farmhouse with a two-story frame house, tore down his farmhouse in 1920.

Growth & Development

The Pacific Northwest's untapped natural resources were a draw that caused the population of Tacoma to grow rapidly. Many people came to "get rich", as they expected money to flow in because the railroad would open up the mid-western and east coast manufacturing centers to the area's products. There were jobs and opportunity.

The waterfront tracks, warehouses and docks were part of an infrastructure that connected shipments of grain, lumber and manufactured goods to stations and ports up and down the West Coast. Tacoma was intended to be the predominant northwest terminal, connecting the Pacific Northwest to Midwestern and eastern manufacturing centers. The fact that Tacoma's port was sheltered from all except north winds played a major factor in the selection of Tacoma as the western terminus.

While all of this was occurring, the North Slope Historic District neighborhood maintained a clear physical proximity to the business and commercial core of Tacoma. As such, the neighborhood attracted both middle and upper class citizens. Among them were medical professionals. Livings within the district were six physicians, six dentists, an oral surgeon, a chiropractor, and two pharmacists. Harbor Master John B. Cliff, Captain Vance D. Trout, Port Captain for Tacoma Oriental S. S. Co., and master mariner Captain Frank G. Purington also all made their homes in this district.

Many famous individuals lived within this District as well. Among these were opera singer Signor Foli, who spent his summers at 1319 North 4th Street, baseball player Edwin F. Hutchinson who lived in a simple American Foursquare at 824 North Grant Avenue, and the well known architect Roland E. Borhek and his family (715 N Sheridan Avenue). Ernst Lister, who served as governor of Washington from 1913-1919, lived at 1402 North 5th Street. Architect Carl Darmer, the favored architect of the Northern Pacific RR Co., also lived in the neighborhood.

Streetcars took residents to the North Slope neighborhood from the downtown. Cable cars were used in the neighborhood until 1938. They were replaced by trolleys then replaced by buses. The old trolley lines are still visible in N 11th St. from N L St. South to N Cushman Ave. where a concrete ribbon, a few feet wide, extends down the center of the entire street.

As more and more families came to settle in Tacoma, city officials wanted to insure that residential areas remained residential. By 1895, Tacomans had begun to establish zones where certain uses, specifically saloons, would be allowed. Local property owners could reject the location of other business within residential parts of Tacoma. By 1918, Tacoma had a zoning code, dividing the city into residential and industrial areas. A planning commission came two years later.

It was the creation of strong neighborhood improvement clubs that held the residential districts together and kept them residential. By 1907, members of the various groups got together to form a citywide federation in order to have a strong voice when dealing with the city for improvements. Today, the citizens of Tacoma still have strong neighborhood organizations and band together to keep the city on its toes.

Boom Times

With three exceptions, about 6 new houses were being built each year during the period of significance. The numbers ranged from one house to a high of twelve. The three exceptions, boom periods, were notable because the numbers greatly exceeded the norm.

The first boom period started in 1890 and lasted 3 years. In that 3-year period, 116 new homes were built. The area suffered a depression in 1893 and building almost stopped. Only 2 new homes were built in 1893 and 1894.

A second wave of development did not get underway until 1900. The good times lasted fifteen years and scattered a variety of classic and regional American Foursquare homes throughout the district before abruptly ending with the onset of World War I. Over the period from 1901 to 1915 a total of 329 new homes were built, about 22 being built each year.

The third "boom" period of growth paralleled the national post-World War One recovery as more modern Craftsman style homes filled the district. Development again came to a halt with the Stock Market crash of 1929 and ensuing Great Depression. Eighty-five percent of the homes in the District were built from 1883 to the end of World War II.

The "boom years" are summarized as follows:

Boom Times

	YEARS	NUMBER NEW HOMES	AVERAGE BUILT PER YEAR
First Boom Ended with the panic of 1893	1890-1893	116	38
Second Boom Ended by W.W. I	1900-1915	329	22
Third Boom Ended with the Great Depression	1920-1929	228	25

As Tacoma's North Slope Historic District developed, buyers had many available lots to purchase. This wide range of choices gave rise to a checkerboard or hopscotch pattern of development. Such a pattern is reflected today in the building styles and construction dates of the houses throughout the area where the Victorians and Foursquare homes are juxtaposed with Craftsman bungalows. The buildings manifest the influence of locally available lumber and an eclectic Northwestern mixing of styles. These physical features are distinguishing characteristics of the homes in the District.

Criterion C

Eligible for the National Register under Criterion C, the North Slope Historic District has a high concentration of dwellings, which represent the work of local craftsmen and architects. This collection, as a whole, represents significant characteristics and trends of architectural styles popular during the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

Descriptions of the various architectural styles found within the district can be found in section 7. The following is a description and list of some of the more prevalent designers and builders in Tacoma who's work can be found within the North Slope Historic District.

Builders and Architects

Design and building in the early years of the North Slope development was led by individuals acting as combined architect, builder and contractor. Bringing varying degrees of experience to the job, these individuals, many whose names are unrecorded, were the first to develop the residential neighborhood. As pioneers of residential development in Tacoma, their work soon augmented by schooled professionals who moved into to the area after leaning about the pending building boom.

The district does have several structures designed by notable local architects: Bullard & Hill, Larkin & Barton, C.A. Darmer, Tuttle & Woodruffe, Ambrose Russell, Emanuel J. Breseman, Oliver Perry Dennis, Proctor & Ferrell, and Frederick Heath.

The styles of these buildings represent what was most popular in America at that time of there construction. Most are not high styles, just good solid examples of what worked within the tastes and budgets of their owners. Prevalent styles show excellent representations of Queen Anne, stick styles, classic American foursquare, and the Craftsman style.

The following is a list of some of the more notable architects, contractors and builders who worked within the North Slope Historic District.

Combined Architects, Builders and Contractors

James J. Brennan

James J. Brennan was the owner, architect and contractor for his own home 1311 North 10th Street, 1889.

Duff, R. D.

BAIN & DUFF

The partnership with Alexander M. Bain and R.D. Duff created many dwellings within the district. Together they acted as architect and contractor for the Lincoln K. Boyle Residence at 1315 North 11th Street (1889), the Bain Building at 1102 North Sheridan Avenue (1889), Professor Max Meyer Residence at 1105 North Sheridan Avenue (1889) and the Nelson E. Handsaker Residence at 1017 North Cushman Avenue (1889). Acting alone, Duff was the architect and contractor for the John Handsaker Residence at 1015 North Cushman Avenue (1889), and the Frank Durr Residence at 809 North Sheridan Avenue (1892).

H. G. Horn

He was the architect and contractor of the George W. Race Residence at 909 North Cushman Avenue, (1889).

Grant, J. N.

He was the architect and contractor of the John M. and Salome Ferris Residence at 802 North Sheridan Avenue (1889).

Neilly, P. J.

He was the architect, builder, and contractor for the Lorenz Y. Stayton Residence at 1012 North Cushman Avenue (1889).

O'Hara, James

He was the owner, architect, and contractor of his own residence at 801 North Ainsworth Avenue (1889).

Shutes, John A.

He was the Owner, architect, and carpenter of his own residence at 919 North Ainsworth Avenue (1889).

Bertleson

Bertleson was the architect and contractor for the Everett C. Miller Residence at 1311 North 9th Street (1890).

Lemley, Burton E.

Burton E. Lemley was the owner and architect for his own home at 615 N. Cushman (1910).

Gingrich, Ivan

Ivan Gingrich was the owner, architect, and contractor for his own home at 717 North Cushman Avenue (1927).

Professional Architects

These schooled professional architects, practiced alone or in firms, and elevated the level of residential design in the North Slope neighborhood. Most notable are Larkin & Barton, Emanuel J. Breseman, Bullard & Hill, Carl August Darmer, Ambrose J. Russell, Tuttle & Woodruffe, Proctor & Ferrell, Oliver Perry Dennis, Frederick Heath, and Bullard & Hill.

Oliver Perry Dennis

PROCTOR & DENNIS

O. P. Dennis worked as an architect in the Tacoma area from 1888-1895. Most of his work was done in partnership with John G. Proctor under the name Proctor & Dennis. Proctor later practiced in California. Oliver Perry Dennis was responsible for the Frank H. Graham Residence at 515 North Sheridan Avenue (1892), the Peter Voorhees Residence at 517 North Sheridan Avenue (1892), the Aaron R. Titlow Residence at 1605 Division Street (1893), and the John H. Wyandt Residence at 508 North Ainsworth Avenue (1893).

Carl August Darmer

DARMER & FERRELL / DARMER & CUTTING

C.A. Darmer was born in Stralund, Prussia in 1858 and received traditional architectural training there as well as apprenticing in building trades. C. A. Darmer followed his profession for a few years in his native country. This was followed by several years in England, Africa, and Australia before stopping in San Francisco in 1882. He was so impressed with the appearance of the country he decided to settle and learned about American building techniques before taking a position in the firm of Warren Williams in Portland, Oregon. Darmer followed the lead of many young architects and builders and relocated to Tacoma after a series of disastrous fires in 1884. Darmer work for W. Ferrell for a time until becoming a partner. Together they designed residences but entire business blocks, schools, churches, and hotels in and around Tacoma. Seven years later he organized another partnership with Otis Cutting and by 1914 was considered independent. Though credited only to Darmer, during the time of Darmer & Ferrell was the John R. A. Cort-van-der-Linden Residence at 1601 North 8th Street (1892) and then during the time of Darmer & Cutting, were the Howard C. Lucas Residence at 1505 North 6th Street (1903), the Thomas H. Dobson Residence at 1509 North 6th Street (1903), and the George W. Boggs/David A. Worden Residence at 1501 North 6th Street (1903).

Spaulding, Russell & Heath

The architectural firm of Spaulding, Russell & Heath was responsible for the Frederick H. Murray Residence at 402 North Sheridan Avenue (1901), and the Burton A. Moore Residence at 414 North Sheridan Avenue (1901).

Spaulding was trained as a Marine Architect. He was associated with the firm of Spaulding, Russell & Heath for only one year.

Frederick Henry Heath

HEATH & SPAULDING / SPAULDING, RUSSELL & HEATH / HEATH, GOVE & BELL, 1911-
Born in La Crosse, Wisconsin F. H. Heath received his architectural training primarily through the firm of Warren H. Hayes in Minneapolis, Minnesota. Heath arrived in Tacoma in 1893, and in 1901 established business as an architect. Heath was, for a period, the official architect for the Tacoma School Board and responsible for the conversion of the old Tacoma Land Hotel into Stadium High School. F. H. Heath, or the firm, with which he was partnered, was responsible for schools, office and public Buildings, hospitals, churches, homes. This includes St. Patrick's, First Church of Christ Scientist, First Lutheran, First Baptist and Sixth Avenue Baptist. He is credited alone with the Forbes P. Haskil, Jr. Residence at 521 North Ainsworth (1906).

George W. Bullard

BULLARD & HAYWORTH / BULLARD & HILL

Bullard was born in Illinois and was a graduate of the University of Illinois. He came to Tacoma in 1890 and opened the firm of Bullard & Hayworth. Some time later Bullard formed a new partnership with I. H. Hill. The firm is best known for their design of the YMCA Building, the First Congregational Church, the First Christian Church, the State Historical Society Building, and Epworth Methodist Church. G. W. Bullard is credited with the Louis B. Stewart Residence at 514 North Sheridan Avenue (1902), the James F. Hopkins Residence at 1521 North 5th Street (1903), the William T. Fletcher Residence at 817 North Sheridan (1906), and the Mrs. Mamie Bettman Residence at 1115 North Steele (1908).

Proctor & Ferrell

The architectural firm of Proctor & Ferrell was responsible for a number of residences and commercial structures throughout Tacoma. The majority of these buildings are no longer standing, such as the Pierce County Courthouse on South G Street. Within the district the firm was responsible for the Governor Ernst Lister Residence at 1402 North 5th Street (1903).

John C. Proctor was considered an "aggressive pioneer" in the architectural field in the west and served for a period as Washington State Architect. He is credited as the designer of the Washington Exposition Building, 1890, Western State Hospital, and the Washington State Capitol Building. In 1891 he formed a partnership with W. Ferrell.

William Ferrell's architectural training was considered to be similar to that of many "frontier" architect-builders. In 1891 he withdrew from his partnership with C.A. Darmer and formed a new partnership with J. Proctor.

Tuttle - Woodrooffe

The architectural firm of Tuttle - Woodrooffe was responsible for the Albert E. Cromwell Residence at 1401 North 6th Street (1907) and the William J. & Mary Love Residence at 607 North Cushman Avenue (1907).

Rollin S. Tuttle was trained as an architect and initially worked with his brother Paul Tuttle who was a contractor. Together they were responsible for designing and building several homes in Tacoma. After what had appeared to be an enthusiastic trip to Southern California in 1906, Rollin decided to join forces with another architect, Arnott Woodrooffe.

Arnott Woodrooffe was a former head draftsman for the firm Russell & Babcock. He once stated that he received the most satisfaction from the design of homes in the Bungalow Style. In 1907 Woodrooffe purchased the firm and by 1908 Rollin had disappeared from the scene. That year he entered into a partnership with Arnold Constable.

Russell & Babcock

The architectural firm of Russell & Babcock was responsible for the Roy E. Davison Residence at 1414 North 5th Street (1907). Everett Phipps Babcock came to Tacoma from New York and was first commissioned to design the Carnegie Library. He formed a partnership with Ambrose J. Russell in 1893.

Ambrose J. Russell was born in Trivandram, India in 1857. The son of a Scottish missionary he lived there for five years. The in 1862 the family moved to Sydney, Australia and then on to the United Kingdom. He received his architectural education at the University of Glasgow and was awarded a scholarship to the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris. He eventually came to America in 1884 and was first employed in the office of H. H. Richardson, in Boston. In 1892 in moved to Tacoma via St. Louis. Later he partnered with Gaston C. Lance.

Western Architectural & Engineering Company

The Western Architectural & Engineering Company was responsible for the Douglas V. Wood residence at 717 North Ainsworth Avenue (1907).

Barton & Larkin

The architectural firm of Barton & Larkin is responsible for the Neal A Jones Residence at 708 North Ainsworth Avenue (1908).

No information is available for partner Vere F. A. Barton. Partner John P. Larkin was responsible individually for the Abel P. Henriot Residence at 515 North Ainsworth Avenue (1907).

Bullard & Hill

The architectural firm of Bullard & Hill was responsible for the Patrick J. Sweeney Residence at 622 North Cushman (1909).

Irwyn H. Hill was a graduate of the University of Illinois. Not long after arriving in Tacoma in 1902, Hill associated with G. W. Bullard, perhaps a classmate at the University of Illinois. The firm is best known for their design of the YMCA Building, the First Congregational Church, the First Christian Church, the State Historical Society Building, and Epworth Methodist Church. From 1918 to 1923, Hill was with the firm of Hill, Mock & Griffin.

Sutton, Whitney & Dugan

The architectural firm of Sutton, Whitney & Dugan was responsible for the Harvey E. Warren Residence at 902 North Grant Avenue.

Albert Sutton was born in Victoria, Canada in 1867 and spent his boyhood in Portland, Oregon. This was followed by two years at the University of California. While there he worked as draftsman for the Southern Pacific Railroad Company until 1895 when he open the firm of Pickles & Sutton, Architects in Tacoma. The following year he returned to San Francisco forming Sutton & Weeks, remaining there until 1910. Sutton moved to Hood River, Oregon briefly and then returned to Portland, Oregon forming Sutton & Whitney in 1915. The in 1918 Mr. Sutton came to Tacoma to establish Sutton & Whitney, Architects, Earl N. Dugan, associate. Albert Sutton was responsible for the Arthur E. Bull Residence at 704 North Cushman Avenue (1893).

Harrison A. Whitney was a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and worked for a period in Boston and later Chicago. He relocated to Portland, Oregon where he worked as head draftsman at Whidden & Lewis until partnering with Mr. Sutton in 1912.

Earl Nathaniel Dugan was born in Boone County, Iowa in 1877 and worked briefly in Chicago after graduating from the University of Illinois in 1906. He relocated to San Francisco after the earthquake and fire before finally moving to Tacoma in 1910. He was instrumental in founding the Tacoma Society of Architects.

Emanuel L. Breseman

Emanuel L. Breseman was responsible for the Hilda Chisholm Residence at 1321 North 5th Street (1916), the Ralph A. Younkin Residence at 650 North Sprague Avenue (1922), and the Thomas P. Hanson Residence at 654 North Sprague Avenue (1922).

Roland E. Borhek

Roland Borhek was born and raised in Boston and worked for a number of years in eastern architectural firms. In 1905 he moved west and joined the firm of A. Warren Gould in Seattle. In 1910 he moved to Tacoma and opened his own office designing many of Tacoma's most notable buildings. Among them are

The Walker Apartment Hotel, the Rialto Theatre, and the Puget Sound Bank building. Roland E. Borhek was responsible for his own residence at 715 North Sheridan Avenue (1920).

Andrew D. Gendron

Little is known about Andrew Gendron. His name first appears in a 1921 newspaper article as the architect engineer for the planned Gray Gables at 1617 Division Street (1922). The 1922 City Directory lists him as Vice President of Riehl & Russell, Inc. a Real Estate, Loan and Insurance business. By 1923, there is no evidence of A. D. Gendron in Tacoma and Riehl & Russell are no longer doing business.

Lance & Russell

The architectural firm of Lance & Russell was responsible for the dwelling at 1505 Division Street (1929).

Gaston C. Lance was born in Bucharest, Romania to French parents in 1877. He left Paris at 18 moving throughout Europe for many years until coming to Seattle in 1909. In 1921 he purchased a carpenter shop in Tacoma and worked at designing and building boats. He eventually met Ambrose J. Russell and they became partners.

Paul Thiry

Known as the father of modernism in the Pacific Northwest, Paul Thiry is notable as the architect of some of the best period buildings around the state of Washington during the 1950, 60s and 70s. His Brutalist style 1970 sanctuary addition to the Christ Episcopal Church (1970) is one of the more notable later buildings in the district. Thiry was a graduate of the architecture school at the University of Washington (1928) and studied at the Ecole des Beaux-Arts in France.

Verbal Boundary Description

Tacoma's North Slope Historic District is located North and slightly West of Tacoma's current central business district. It is part of a street plat that was laid out parallel to the waterfront and as such is at a forty-five degree angle to the rest of the City. The area is bounded by North I Street on the North, Grant Ave on the South, Division Avenue at the East and Steele Street at the West.

Boundary Justification

The District is bounded by I Street, a main arterial on the north. Division Ave is a main arterial on the east, while N Steele Street, a busy residential street, holds down the west. North Grant Ave caps off the south end of the trapezoid. The street plat for this area was laid out starting parallel to the waterfront of Commencement Bay, and continuing up the hill. These streets are at a 45-degree angle to the rest of Tacoma and form a natural dividing line with the rest of the city, which follows a north-south, east-west grid. The offset, platted years ago, remains today and uniquely defines the District.
